

1999 Budapest, Hungary

“Quality and Equality”

CONCLUSIONS

Achievement of quality in education can be helped by following methods:

- providing accessible material and human resources
- raising of the level of teachers' education
- remuneration making it possible for teachers to concentrate their energies on school work
- increasing the social esteem of pedagogical work
- increasing local material resources for promotion of self-reliant creative work
- drawing of students into the management of their affairs so that they participate in the formation of their future in a responsible and engaged way as citizens
- new technologies are provided
- foreign languages are provided

A development can only be achieved by co-ordination of the efforts of schools, authorities and social forces.

At least 40 % of the budget should be spent on the educational system in spite of the financial shortage in most European countries.

A high quality educational system puts the human being into the centre of all efforts and acts according the declaration of human rights as set up by the UN.